YOUNG LEADERS, CITY LEADERS TO DISCUSS NEW REGIONAL PARTNERSHIP

Detroit-area mayors are initiating a new system of regional cooperation, and they need young partners. The Millennial Mayors Congress launches in 2009, bringing together experienced and aspiring leaders to develop solutions to regional challenges.

More than 25 metro Detroiters (aged roughly 18-30) will serve with their mayor as representatives of their city and be the connection to a network of their peers.

Young people, city leaders and interested others will convene next week to discuss the role young people can play in the Millennial Mayors Congress. This event is free and open to all. Please RSVP to Toni Mocerri at toni@suburbsalliance.org

WHAT: Millennial Mayors Congress Visioning Session
WHEN: Tuesday, December 16, 2008. 6:00-9:00 p.m. Program begins at 6:30 p.m.*
WHERE: The Renaissance Club. Tower 200, Floor 36 of the Renaissance Center
WHO: Young metro Detroiters, city leaders and others who want to see the next generation involved in the region's return to prosperity
WHY: To discuss the engagement of young people in the Millennial Mayors Congress

The Millennial Mayors Congress is a developing partnership of city leaders and young people who care about the future of metro Detroit. Using consensus-based decision-making, it seeks to establish a collaborative, forward-looking system for building regional prosperity.

The Michigan Suburbs Alliance, a 501(c)3 nonprofit organization working to streamline redevelopment, improve regional cooperation and reform public policies impacting inner-ring suburbs, provides administrative and organizational support to this initiative. Visit www.suburbsalliance.org for details about the Millennial Mayors Congress.
